Compassion Fatigue

“...the emotional residue or strain of exposure to working with those suffering from consequences of traumatic events.”

(American Institute of Stress, 2017)

It refers to the profound emotional and physical erosion that takes place when helpers are unable to refuel and regenerate.

(Figley, 1982)

Vicarious Trauma/Secondary Traumatic Stress

“...the emotional residue of exposure” that one can have “from working with people as they are hearing their trauma stories and become witnesses to the pain, fear, and terror that trauma survivors have endured.”

(American Counseling Association, 2011)

“...the profound shift in worldview that occurs in helping professionals when they work with clients who have experienced trauma...your fundamental beliefs about the world are altered and damaged with repeated exposure to traumatic material.”

(Perlman & Saakvitne, 1995)

Burnout

“...the cumulative process marked by emotional exhaustion and withdrawal associated with workload and institutional stress, not trauma related.”

Characterized by exhaustion, cynicism, and inefficiency

Professional Quality of Life Scale (PROQOL)

COMPASSION SATISFACTION AND COMPASSION FATIGUE (PROQOL) VERSION 5 (2009)

When you [help] people you have direct contact with their lives. As you may have found, your compassion for those you [help] can affect you in positive and negative ways. Below are some questions about your experiences, both positive and negative, as a [helper]. Consider each of the following questions about you and your current work situation. Select the number that honestly reflects how frequently you experienced these things in the last 30 days.
